How do I buy Site Licensing?

Contact FileMaker Sales at (800) 725-2747 or your preferred partner to discuss your pricing options.

How is the initial number of seats determined under the Site Licensing programs?

The number of seats for a site license is calculated by the current total employee headcount. Temporary employees, contractors, and consultants who work onsite at your facilities may also use the software to perform business-related practices, so long as they are included in the initial number of seats. It is important that a total headcount be used to calculate the site license quantity even though not 100% of all employees may use FileMaker. The exceptional pricing discount offered by the site licensing program already accounts for customers who have less than 100% of their employees using the software.

What entities are eligible for Site Licensing?

- Whole companies or organizations - means the entire company or organization
- Subsidiary - a separate, distinct legal entity for the purposes of taxation, regulation, and liability
- Operations in a specific country - the entire company or organization within a specific country is eligible

Example of entities that are NOT eligible:

- Single departments within a company are not eligible (e.g., the support department for company)
- Single divisions which are not formal subsidiaries. A division of a company which is integrated into the main company or organization, and not legally separate or otherwise distinct from it, is not eligible.
- Single functions or business units within a company are not eligible (e.g., Marketing, HR, or IS functions on their own).

I'm a Site Licensing customer. What happens if my headcount increases?

If your total number of new seats does not exceed 10% of your employee count during the maintenance or annual subscription period, you do not need to pay for additional seats until the renewal date of the agreement. If you increase your total number of employees by more than 10% within the maintenance or annual subscription period, you need to pay for the new seats, at that time.
